MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing reviews your support options, and helps you develop a support strategy for your employees and managers.

1. Contact MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing and provide overview of situation

2. MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing reviews your support options, and helps you develop a support strategy for your employees and managers

3. MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing provides you with a customized Action Plan

4. You implement Action Plan while MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing coordinates support services

5. MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing coordinates debrief and connects you with additional resources, if needed

Specialized Support For:
- When an employee passes away
- When employees present with emotional distress
- When an organizational crisis or disruption occurs

Who should contact:
- Directors
- Associate Deans
- Team Managers
- Team Supervisors
- Human Resources
- Other Leadership

Support Options (See Page 2)
- Individual Sessions
- Group Sessions
- Outreach Phone Calls
- Manager Consultations

Action Plan Includes
- Recommended Contacts and Next Steps
- Email Templates (if needed)
- Helpful Information and Strategies

Review and Share, As Needed
- Email Templates
- Counselor Bio and Group Description
- Family Benefits Checklist (See Pages 3-4)
- Employee and Family Support Strategies (See Pages 5-6)

Helpful Information and Strategies Include:
- Curated Articles
- Benefits Checklist
- Employee and Family Support Strategies

Liz Guttenberg, LCSW
Manager, Employee WellBeing
Phone: 781-640-2592
Email: guttenee@mit.edu

Ronnie Mae Weiss, MSW
Senior Manager, Employee WorkLife and WellBeing
Phone: 617-306-0222
Email: rmweiss@mit.edu

Specialized Support For:
- When an employee passes away
- When employees present with emotional distress
- When an organizational crisis or disruption occurs
Departments may choose one or more of the following crisis support services provided by Master- and PhD-level clinicians

Individual Sessions
Employees are always encouraged to contact MyLife Services — a free, confidential resource for MIT employees and their household members — for individual support sessions. Counseling and stress management consultations can be conducted via phone, video conference, or messaging application.

Group Sessions
Group sessions are useful for building a sense of collectivity and cohesion when employees are physically separated.

The Center for WorkLife and WellBeing can coordinate group support sessions in either of the two formats below:

- A small, interactive format with up to 20 participants – most effective for processing grief when a loss is anticipated or has already occurred
- A large, webinar format, with up to 300 participants – most effective for disseminating information and answering questions related to grief, stress, and anxiety

Outreach Phone Calls
MyLife Services can make outreach phone calls to both employees and their household members who wish to speak with a counselor for individual support.

Please note: The employee’s written or oral permission is a prerequisite for this service.

Manager Consultations
MyLife Services can advise managers on how to support their employees’ emotional needs during challenging times, while promoting productivity and engagement in dynamic work environments. Consultations can be conducted via phone or video conference.
When a family member dies, it’s easy to feel overwhelmed. In addition to coping with your own grief, there are so many pressing needs to address. As a family member of a deceased MIT employee, you may be entitled to a number of benefits and compensation. This checklist will make it easier for you to understand and address them without adding stress to what is already a painful time for you and your family.

Inform MIT Benefits that your loved one has passed away:

- MIT Benefits
  - hr.mit.edu/life-events/death
- Cari Angellotti
  - Email: caria@mit.edu
  - Phone: 617-258-7489
- Kristen Panagopoulos
  - Email: kpanago@mit.edu
  - Phone: 617-253-4270

MIT Benefits will develop and mail you a customized summary of your loved one’s benefits along with a request for documentation required for processing.

MIT Benefits will connect you with other Human Resources services as needed.

When reviewing your customized benefits summary, be sure to consider the information outlined below and contact MIT Benefits if you have questions:

Health, Dental, and Vision Insurance

- Was your loved one enrolled in an MIT Health, Dental, and/or Vision insurance plan? If so, when will the benefits terminate?

- Were you enrolled in your loved one's MIT Health, Dental, and/or Vision insurance plan as a family member? If so, what are your coverage options after your loved one’s benefits terminate?

- Are there any outstanding bills or payments that require your attention?
Flexible Spending Account (FSA)
• Was your loved one enrolled in a Flexible Spending Account?
• If so, how may remaining funds (if any) be utilized?

Life and Accidental Death Insurance
• Did your loved one hold one or more MIT Life Insurance policies? (There are three options: Basic, Supplemental, and Dependent.)
• If you are listed as a beneficiary, what benefits can you expect and what steps are necessary for you to collect on these?

Retirement Plans (401(k) and Pension)
• Was your loved one enrolled in an MIT Retirement plan (e.g., 401(k) and Pension)?
• If you are listed as a beneficiary, what benefits can you expect and what steps are necessary for you to collect on these?

Other Benefits
• Was your loved one enrolled in a Long-Term Care Insurance policy?
• Did your loved one hold an account with MIT Federal Credit Union?
• If so, MIT Benefits can provide contact information for these vendors.

Need more help? Contact MIT MyLife Services – a 24/7, free, confidential counseling and consultative resource available to family members of deceased MIT employees – for emotional support and work-life resources and referrals

MIT MyLife Services
Website: my.kgalifeservices.com
Phone: 844-405-5433
Email: info@mitmylifeservices.com
When an employee in your department passes away, colleagues and family members may look to you for support and guidance as they navigate through the grieving process. Responding to their expectations might feel layered and challenging. This guide provides strategies and resources that will help you begin guiding your organization through the painful experience of a collective loss toward healing and acceptance of a new normal.

Administrative Strategies:

- Contact your Human Resources Officer. Your Human Resources Officer will:
  - Connect you with Central Human Resources for administrative support.
  - Connect you with Human Resources Communications to help you develop an internal (and external, if needed), communications strategy.
- Contact Information Technology for assistance with redirecting your employee’s emails and phone calls.

Strategies for Supporting Employees:

- Contact the MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing to schedule MyLife Services employee support services. Departments may arrange to receive one or more of the following:
  - Individual Sessions
  - Group Sessions
  - Outreach Phone Calls
  - Note: If these support services will take place on campus, then the MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing will deliver MyLife Services materials to hand out as needed.
- Assign one colleague to communicate with the deceased employee’s family on behalf of your department. This will protect the family from being inundated with calls and emails, while still allowing colleagues to receive information and provide support.
• Offer colleagues the opportunity to write letters of condolence to be sent to your employee’s family in one care package (along with flowers, if appropriate).

• Organize a virtual meeting for your department or team so that colleagues can share fond memories of your employee and express what they will miss about working together.

• Make a targeted effort to call or email impacted employees to acknowledge their grief and encourage self-care:
  > Acknowledge that they may find it difficult to concentrate during the initial mourning period.
  > Normalize the need for everyone on your team to seek counseling and emotional support from others.
  > Provide information about support through MyLife Services and encourage them to explore community, spiritual, and online resources that can help colleagues process their grief.

Strategies for Supporting Family Members:

• Contact MyLife Services to discuss culturally-sensitive ways in which you can support your employee’s family.

• Ask about funeral and memorial plans and whether the family is comfortable with department members attending.

• If you have a discretionary fund or know that your team would like to make a contribution, ask the family whether your department can help cover a portion of the funeral or memorial service costs.

• Encourage the employee's family to contact the MIT Center for WorkLife and WellBeing. Emotional support through MyLife Services remains available as a benefit to family members following the death of an employee.

• Provide the family with the Benefits Checklist.

• Consider creating a memorial fund in honor of your employee. Ask the family what organization(s) or charities they would like to sponsor the fund.